

A large, glowing yellow and orange mushroom cloud from a nuclear explosion, set against a dark background. The cloud has a bright, intense core at its base and a large, billowing cap at the top.

WWIII Perspective From The Eyes Of John Simons

HDMG

Fiction

BOOK 1

Disclaimer

Any Characters Mentioned In This Book Is Completely Fictional. HDMG nor Rytr.me Purposefully Target These People. Even John Simons Is A Fictional Character Not to Be Represented for any Real "John Simons"

A Book By HDMG Books

HDMG Books

WWIII Perspective - From The Eyes Of John Simons Book 1 © 2022 by M Harsha Deepan is licensed under Attribution-NonCommercial-ShareAlike 4.0 International. To view a copy of this license, visit <http://creativecommons.org/licenses/by-nc-sa/4.0/>

Original 2022

Written With <https://rytr.me>

With help of M Harsha Deepan

This Book Is For Entertainment purposes Only

World War 3 - John Simons' Journal

John is at home in his apartment. He hears a window break downstairs. He moves to the window and sees a man and woman wearing gas masks and holding guns. They are coming up the stairs to John's apartment.

John grabs a knife, but they burst into the room before he can do anything. They shoot him in the stomach, but he doesn't die. The next thing John remembers is waking up inside of his own grave.

John doesn't know how long he was unconscious for, but he is now out of the grave and on a street filled with rubble and ruins. There are people walking around on the street, mostly zombies or robots (or something like them). John tries to ask for help from some people walking by, but they seem very uninterested in him, only saying "We have our own problems." After asking three groups of people for help, all three groups leave him all alone on the street.

The scene switches to show that it is actually 2050 And He Has Been Unconscious For A Long Long Time...

In 2050 World War 3 has begun and all over the world, nuclear bombs are being dropped. One city was lucky enough to have survived the initial blasts, only to be put on lockdown by the government. In desperation, journalist John Simons begins to document his thoughts in a journal.

While some people survive and thrive, others don't survive at all. John is mostly solitary during his journaling period and he struggles with his own personal demons (perhaps manifested via a love interest gone astray). He also begins to notice that while this war started with nuclear bombs, it's now shifting into a new kind of war--one fought by manipulating information and human psychology.

John is then tasked with a mission to infiltrate an enemy bunker in Canada. What will happen?

March 5 2050 -

It's 2050 and WWII has begun.

I'm a journalist who is reporting on this war but something tells me it's part of a larger story.

The first few months of the war, I reported on the global tensions building up to a full-fledged war. But now that it's underway, I'm feeling more desensitized and the "war footage" is just work. I'm seeing new things all the time: cities in flames and people being killed, with no empathy or sadness for them at all.

But then one day, in an act of mercy, an American soldier shoots down an attacking drone from one of our own factories. And I couldn't help but feel guilty for even thinking about this as just my job.

This happened more and more, when our ground troops would come across drones from other countries - even their own drones- with their optics jammed and warheads disabled before they could reach their targets, leading to the Tying Americans taking out the North Koreans.

Though The Leader Of North Korea Tio Rong-Dik Was Aware That The Americans Were Going to Strike War Against Them. Tio Rong-Dik

Made His Troops To Fire Nuclear Warheads To The US , Straight Aiming At California.

Though , What A Coincidence I Was In California To Interview Zark Muckerberg.....

And Then They Strike , But The Warhead Fell Down In The Ocean Seeming It Was In Non-Working State Abandoned....

Eventually , I Completed The Interview And Went Back to New York.

—

April 22 2050,

Yes , I am Lazy To Write This Journal Cause I've Been Going to a Lot Of Trouble.

I, John Simons, am writing this journal as the nuclear war known as World War 3 has begun. All I have is my journal and a pen to write this.

It all started one day when I was walking to work and saw the child of an immigrant family on the sidewalk. They had just moved to America. They were looking at me, and I thought they were going to take my belongings from me, or do something bad. I was scared, so I grabbed my pen out of my pocket and threw it at them. It hit the mother of the family in her stomach when she tried to stop me. That's when things got out of control.

The people started coming after me, but then a car came by with a person inside who told me to get in and he would take me somewhere safe from them. He told me that he was trying to help and that he was sorry for what had happened in there country. He said he would take Me to

.....

—

Overview To The Next Book....

The book starts off on the day when the Russian president, Pladimir Vutin, is assassinated.

The Russians retaliate by launching their missiles at all of Europe.

From then on in, it is a fight for survival as John Simons, the author, tells his story.

It is 2050 and World War 3 has begun. Nuclear war all over the place. Journal by John Simons."

To Be Continued >>>